

79 Cal.App.5th 1016

Court of Appeal, First District, Division 1, California.

Aleksandr REZNITSKIY et al., Plaintiffs and Appellants,

v.

COUNTY OF MARIN et al.,
Defendants and Respondents.

A161813

|

Filed 6/15/2022

|

Certified for Partial Publication.*

Synopsis

Background: Prospective builders of single-family residence filed petition for writ of administrative mandamus challenging county's denial of their building project. The Superior Court, Marin County, No. CIV1903573, Stephen P. Freccero, J., affirmed. Prospective builders appealed.

[Holding:] The Court of Appeal, Humes, P.J., held that as a matter of first impression, the Housing Accountability Act (HAA) does not apply to projects to build individual single-family homes.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes (13)

[1] Mandamus 🔑 Decisions reviewable and proper mode of review

Order denying petition for writ of administrative mandamus is appealable if it effectively disposes of action because no issues remain to be determined.

[2] Mandamus 🔑 Weight and sufficiency

Mandamus 🔑 Scope of inquiry and powers of court

In an administrative writ proceeding that does not involve a fundamental vested right, the trial court reviews the agency's factual findings for substantial evidence and its legal conclusions de novo.

[3] Mandamus 🔑 Scope and extent in general

In an administrative writ proceeding that does not involve a fundamental vested right, appellate court reviews the agency's decision, rather than the trial court's decision, applying the same standard of review applicable in the trial court.

[4] Appeal and Error 🔑 Statutory or legislative law

Court of Appeal independently reviews issues of statutory interpretation.

[5] Statutes 🔑 Purpose and intent

Court's primary task in interpreting a statute is to determine the Legislature's intent, giving effect to the law's purpose.

1 Case that cites this headnote

[6] Statutes 🔑 Language and intent, will, purpose, or policy

The words of a statute are the most reliable indicator of legislative intent.

1 Case that cites this headnote

[7] Statutes 🔑 Construction based on multiple factors

Court construing a statute gives the words in a statute their usual and ordinary meaning, while construing them in light of the statute as a whole and the statute's purpose.

[8] Statutes 🔑 Clarity and ambiguity; multiple meanings

If there is no ambiguity in statutory language, court construing statute presumes the Legislature meant what it said and the plain meaning of the statute governs.

[9] Statutes 🔑 Context

Statutes 🔑 Construing together; harmony

Statutes 🔑 Similar or Related Statutes

If a statute's language is ambiguous or susceptible of more than one reasonable interpretation, court interpreting it may examine the context in which the language appears, adopting construction that best harmonizes the statute internally and with related statutes.

1 Case that cites this headnote

[10] Administrative Law and

Procedure 🔑 Contemporaneous or subsequent construction in general

Statutes 🔑 Extrinsic Aids to Construction

In construing a statute, court may look to a variety of extrinsic aids, including ostensible objects to be achieved, evils to be remedied, legislative history, public policy, and contemporaneous administrative construction.

1 Case that cites this headnote

[11] Statutes 🔑 Intent

Court's focus in interpreting statutory language is on the legislature's intent when it enacted the statute, not on hypothetical post-enactment legislative intent.

[12] Zoning and Planning 🔑 One-family, two-family, or multiple dwellings

The Housing Accountability Act (HAA), which aims to significantly increase construction of new, affordable housing for California's communities, and which sets forth that a housing development project cannot be denied or reduced in density without specified health and safety findings, does not apply to projects to build individual single-family homes. Cal. Gov't Code § 65589.5\(j\)\(1\).

[13] Statutes 🔑 Departing from or varying language of statute

Statutes 🔑 Legislative History

Rules of liberal construction of statutes do not allow court to ignore the statutory language or construe it to accomplish a purpose that does not appear on the face of the statute or from its legislative history.

**245 Trial Court: Marin County Superior Court, Trial Judge: Hon. Stephen P. Freccero (Marin County Super. Ct. No. CIV1903573)

Attorneys and Law Firms

Counsel for Plaintiffs and Appellants: Ryan J. Patterson, Emily L. Brough, Zacks, Freedman & Patterson, San Francisco

Counsel for Amicus Curiae Californians for Homeownership on behalf of Plaintiffs and Appellants: Matthew Gelfand, Allyson Richman

Counsel for Amicus Curiae California Association of REALTORS® on behalf of Plaintiffs and Appellants: Neil D. Kalin, Los Angeles

Counsel for Amicus Curiae Building Industry Association – Bay Area on behalf of Plaintiffs and Appellants: Paul B. Campos

Counsel for Amicus Curiae YIMBY Law on behalf of Plaintiffs and Appellants: Kenneth Stahl, Miller Starr Regalia

Counsel for Defendants and Respondents: Brian E. Washington, County Counsel, Brian C. Case, Deputy County Counsel, Brandon W. Halter, Deputy County Counsel

Opinion

Humes, P.J.

*1020 —The Housing Accountability Act (HAA) (Gov. Code, § 65589.5)<sup>1</sup> was enacted 40 years ago as part of broad legislative efforts to address California's housing crisis. The statute aims “to significantly increase the approval and construction of new housing for all economic segments of California's communities by meaningfully and effectively curbing the capability of local governments to deny, reduce the density for, or render infeasible housing development projects and emergency shelters.” (§ 65589.5, subd. (a)(2)(K).) As one way to encourage housing construction, the HAA bars local agencies from denying any proposed “housing development project” unless the denial is based on objective criteria or the agency finds that the project would adversely impact public health or safety. (§ 65589.5, subd. (j)(1).)

*1021 Aleksandr Reznitskiy and Cecily Rogers (plaintiffs) appeal from the denial of their petition for a writ of administrative mandamus involving their application to build a nearly 4,000-square-foot single-family home on a hillside lot in San Anselmo (the project). After concluding that the project was not subject to the HAA, respondents Marin County and the County of Marin Board of Supervisors (collectively, the County) denied plaintiffs’ application on several bases, including that the home was outsized compared to the surrounding neighborhood. Plaintiffs claim that their planned home qualifies as a “housing development project” under the HAA and that the County improperly rejected it based on subjective criteria. They also claim that the County is equitably estopped from arguing that the HAA does not apply and that, in any case, insufficient evidence supports the County's decision.

We conclude that the County lawfully rejected plaintiffs’ application. In the published portion of this opinion, we address a longstanding question the Legislature has deliberately left unresolved and hold that **246 the HAA does not apply to a project to build an individual single-family home. In the remaining portion of the opinion, we reject plaintiffs’ equitable estoppel and insufficient evidence claims. Accordingly, we affirm.

I.

Factual and Procedural Background

In 2016, plaintiffs applied to build a single-family home and accessory dwelling unit (ADU) totaling 5,145 square feet on a 1.76-acre lot they own in San Anselmo. The lot is “heavily wooded” and slopes “steeply” upward from a creek. It has no vehicular access, and the project included a driveway that bridged the creek, a “concrete parking deck with an emergency access/ turnaround area,” and a temporary access road to enable construction of the house and driveway. Plaintiffs also sought a tree-removal permit because the project proposed removing “[a]pproximately 19 trees ... classified as either ‘protected’ or ‘heritage’ per the Marin County Development Code.”

After receiving preliminary comments from the planning division of the County's Community Development Agency (Agency), plaintiffs revised the project to remove the ADU and reduce the house's floor plan to 3,872 square feet. In February 2019, the planning division issued an administrative decision approving the project and granting the tree removal permit. The decision found that as redesigned, the project was compatible with the surrounding neighborhood and consistent with the Marin Countywide Plan and the Marin County Code's mandatory findings for design review.

*1022 The following month, neighbors appealed the planning division's decision to the Marin County Planning Commission (Commission). They argued that the size of the project rendered it incompatible with the neighborhood, and they provided a survey showing that “[t]he average size of the nearest 25 residences [was] 1,544 square feet,” significantly smaller than plaintiffs’ proposed house. The neighbors also argued that the creek would be negatively affected, questioned the need for a large bridge, and urged that fewer trees be removed.

Before the Commission hearing on the appeal in May 2019, the planning division prepared a report recommending that its administrative decision be upheld. At the hearing, an array of evidence was considered, including the staff report, project plans, testimony by Reznitskiy, and written and oral opposition from the public. After several commissioners expressed concern about the project's scale and environmental impacts, the Commission unanimously voted to grant the neighbors’ appeal and deny the project.

Plaintiffs appealed the Commission's decision to the County of Marin Board of Supervisors (Board). Among other arguments, plaintiffs claimed that “further downsizing” of the project was unnecessary and that the project's denial violated the HAA. The Agency submitted a letter to the Board recommending that the project's denial be upheld, now agreeing that the project was outsized for the neighborhood and would unduly impact the creek and environment. The letter contended that the HAA applied only to “large-scale housing projects such as mixed-use, multiple residential unit projects, transitional and supportive housing,” and the project “[did] not qualify as [such] a higher density residential project.”

In August 2019, the Board heard plaintiffs’ administrative appeal. Additional evidence was presented, including the testimony of two of plaintiffs’ civil engineers and further testimony by neighbors opposed to the project. One Board supervisor **247 observed that although plaintiffs had “a right to develop” the property, the project was “not ready for prime time yet” and “need[ed] to be scaled down and the design refined.” The Board then unanimously voted to uphold the Commission’s decision denying the project. The Board also issued a resolution summarizing its reasons for denying plaintiffs’ appeal. As relevant here, the resolution affirmed that the proposed residence was oversized and concluded that the HAA did not apply to the project.

[1] The following month, plaintiffs filed a petition for a writ of administrative mandamus in the trial court to challenge the County’s denial of the project. They claimed that the project constituted a “housing development project” under the HAA and “comple[d] with all applicable objective general plan *1023 and zoning standards and criteria, including design review standards, in effect at the time of the Project application” under section 65589.5, subdivision \(j\)\(1\). Alternatively, plaintiffs argued that even if the HAA did not apply, the County’s findings were not supported by substantial evidence. In December 2020, the trial court rejected these arguments and denied the petition.<sup>2</sup>

II.

Discussion

A. General Legal Standards

1. Standards of review in administrative writ proceedings

In their petition for a writ of administrative mandamus, plaintiffs claimed the County prejudicially abused its discretion in denying their application to build the project. Under Code of Civil Procedure section 1094.5, subdivision \(b\), “[a]buse of discretion is established if the [agency] has not proceeded in the manner required by law, the order or decision is not supported by the findings, or the findings are not supported by the evidence.”

[2] [3] In an administrative writ proceeding that, like this one, does not involve a fundamental vested right, the trial court reviews the agency’s factual findings for substantial evidence and its legal conclusions de novo. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1094.5, subd. \(c\); [Schafer v. City of Los Angeles \(2015\) 237 Cal.App.4th 1250, 1260–1261 \[188 Cal.Rptr.3d 655\]](#).) “An appellate court in a case not involving a fundamental vested right reviews the agency’s decision, rather than the trial court’s decision, applying the same standard of review applicable in the trial court.” (Schafer, at p. 1261.)

2. The HAA

The HAA is part of the Housing Element Law (§ 65580 et seq.), “which ‘set[s] forth in considerable detail a municipality’s obligations to analyze and quantify the ... locality’s share of the regional housing need ... and to adopt and to submit to California’s Department of Housing and Community Development [(Department)] a multiyear schedule of actions the local government is undertaking to meet these needs.’ ” ( [\*1024 California Renters Legal Advocacy & Education Fund v. City of San Mateo \(2021\) 68 Cal.App.5th 820, 834 \[283 Cal.Rptr.3d 877\] \(California Renters\)](#).) In 1982, the Legislature enacted the HAA, “colloquially known as the ‘Anti-NIMBY’ (Not-In-My-Back-Yard) law,” to address the dearth of housing in the state. (California Renters, at p. 835.) Under \*\*248 section 65589.5, subdivision \(j\) \(section 65589.5\(j\)\)—the provision that plaintiffs contend applies to the project—“[w]hen a proposed housing development project complies with applicable, objective general plan, zoning, and subdivision standards and criteria, including design review standards, in effect at the time the application was deemed complete,” the local agency cannot “disapprove the project or ... impose a condition that the project be developed at a lower density” unless it finds that (1) the project “would have a specific, adverse impact upon the public health or safety unless the project is disapproved or approved upon the condition that the project be developed at a lower density” and (2) “[t]here is no feasible method to satisfactorily mitigate or avoid [that] adverse impact, other than disapproval of the housing development project or the approval of the project upon the condition that it be developed at a lower density.” (§ 65589.5\(j\)\(1\).) A project must be “deemed consistent, compliant, and in conformity with” applicable use. ¶¶ (C) Transitional housing or supportive housing.” There is little case law interpreting this statutory definition. In Honchariw I, the Fifth District Court of Appeal addressed whether a project to build “a single-family dwelling to ultimately be constructed on each of ... eight proposed lots” was a “proposed housing development project” under section 65589.5(j). (Honchariw I, supra, 200 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1072, 1074.) Honchariw I’s primary holding was that although other subdivisions of section 65589.5 address affordable housing, subdivision (j) “is not limited to affordable housing development projects.” (Honchariw I, at pp. 1075, 1077; accord, North Pacifica, LLC v. City of Pacifica (N.D.Cal. 2002) 234 F.Supp.2d 1053, 1057.) The Court of Appeal also stated in passing that since the project contemplated eight single-family homes, its “anticipated use [was] ... ‘[r]esidential units only’ (§ 65589.5, subd. (h)(2)(A)), and the proposed project [was] therefore a ‘proposed housing development project’ within the meaning of **250 section 65589.5(j).” (Honchariw I, at p. 1074.) But no decision has addressed whether a project to build a single residential unit qualifies as a “housing development project.”

In considering the question, we begin by observing that the statutory definition is imprecise because it does not describe what a “housing development project” is. The provision does not explicitly define the words “housing,” “development,” or “project,” either individually or collectively. (See § 65589.5, subd. (h)(2).) Rather, the provision states that the term “means a use” consisting of one of three types, thus focusing only on the purpose a project must have to be subject to subdivision (j)’s stricter requirements for disapproval. (§ 65589.5, subd. (h)(2); see Honchariw I, supra, 200 Cal.App.4th at p. 1074.)

The reason for this focus is explained by the legislative history of Senate Bill No. 619 (2003–2004 Reg. Sess.) (Senate Bill No. 619), which added the definition of “housing development project” to the HAA.<sup>4</sup> This part of the bill *1027 was described as “[e]xtend[ing] protections of the anti-NIMBY act to mixed-use housing developments.” (Sen. Rules Com., Off. of Sen. Floor Analyses, 3d reading analysis of Sen. Bill No. 619, as amended May 27, 2003, p. 3.)<sup>5</sup> While at the time the HAA prevented an agency “from disapproving an affordable housing development” without making certain findings, the bill “provide[d] that, in addition to residential-only developments, the protections of the [HAA would] apply to mixed-use residential developments in which neighborhood-serving commercial uses occupy the first floor of a building that is at least two stories.” (Sen. Housing & Community Development Com., Rep. on Sen. Bill No.

619, Apr. 4, 2003, p. 3.) Thus, it is apparent that the purpose of adding the definition was to clarify that mixed-use developments are subject to the HAA, not to define comprehensively the term “housing development project.”

This matters because unless we know the full meaning of “housing development project,” it is difficult to evaluate the parties’ central dispute: whether the plural term “residential units” includes the singular “residential unit.” The County claims that we “need look no further than the plain text” of section 65589.5, subdivision (h)(2)(A), “which uses the words ‘residential units,’ in the plural form,” to conclude that an individual single-family house is excluded. This argument has some force, as the ordinary meaning of “residential units” is more than one residential unit. (See, e.g., People v. Rodriguez (2012) 55 Cal.4th 1125, 1132 [150 Cal.Rptr.3d 533, 290 P.3d 1143] (plur. opn.) [plain meaning of “ ‘criminal **251 conduct by members’ ” of a gang requires at least two members participate (italics omitted)].)

But as plaintiffs observe, if “residential units” is strictly construed to mean the plural only, it is not apparent why “mixed-use developments” under subdivision (h)(2)(B) of section 65589.5 should not also be so construed. Yet if “[m]ixed-use developments” included the plural only, then we would be left with the absurd result that a single mixed-use development project would not qualify as a housing development project.<sup>6</sup> Although the County dismisses plaintiffs’ argument as overly technical, we conclude that the use of *1028 the plural, standing alone, does not establish that only the plural was intended. (See, e.g., Bay Guardian Co. v. New Times Media LLC (2010) 187 Cal.App.4th 438, 460–461 [114 Cal.Rptr.3d 392] [rejecting “literal reading” of plural that would result in “illogical and meaningless consequences”].)

The Department has interpreted the HAA not to “apply to applications for individual single-family residences,” reasoning that “[b]ecause the term ‘units’ is plural, a development has to consist of more than one unit to qualify under the [statute].” (Dept. of Housing and Community Development, Housing Accountability Act Technical Assistance Advisory mem., Sept. 15, 2020, p. 19 <<https://www.hcd.ca.gov/community-development/housing-element/housing-element-memos/docs/hcd-memo-on-haa-final-sept2020.pdf>> [as of June 15, 2022].) Plaintiffs argue that we should not defer to this interpretation, and the County does not argue otherwise. Since we do not find the HAA’s use of the plural “units” to be definitive, we give little weight to the Department's interpretation in our de novo review of the statute's meaning. (See Yamaha Corp. of America v. State Bd. of Equalization (1998) 19 Cal.4th 1, 7–8 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 1, 960 P.2d 1031].)

Although we agree with plaintiffs that the use of the plural “units” does not establish that only the plural was intended, we are unconvinced that section 13, which provides that “[t]he singular number includes the plural, and the plural the singular,” necessarily controls. “Section 13 is subject to the usual qualification that the definitions given in such preliminary sections govern the construction of the Government Code ‘[u]nless the provision or the context otherwise requires ...’ (§ 5.) Preliminary definitions are superseded when they obviously conflict with the Legislature's subsequent use of the term in a different statute in a different context.” (Price v. Tennant Community Services Dist. (1987) 194 Cal.App.3d 491, 499 [239 Cal.Rptr. 572], italics added; see People v. Rodriguez, supra, 55 Cal.4th at pp. 1132–1133 (plur. opn.) [considering similar provision under the Pen. Code].) In short, we cannot resolve whether a single house qualifies as a “housing development project” based merely on the HAA's reference to “residential units.”

We therefore turn to the broader meaning of “housing development project.” The **252 HAA falls under chapter 3 of the Planning and Zoning Law (§ 65000 et seq.). Although the words “housing,” “development,” and “project” are not individually defined in this chapter, “the terms development, project[,] and development project are defined in another chapter of the Planning and Zoning *1029 Law,” chapter 4.5, “relating to the review and approval of development projects.” (Chandis Securities Co. v. City of Dana Point (1996) 52 Cal.App.4th 475, 485–486 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 481] (Chandis)).

In Chandis, the Fourth District Court of Appeal addressed whether a city's proposed “adoption of a specific plan and a general plan amendment relating to [the] plaintiffs' property” that would have “allow[ed] development of the land” qualified as a “housing development project” under the HAA when that term was not yet statutorily defined. (Chandis, supra, 52 Cal.App.4th at pp. 479, 485–486.) Chandis determined it was appropriate to consult the definitions in chapter 4.5 of the Planning and Zoning Law because “identical words ... in different statutes relating to the same subject matter are construed as having the same meaning.” (Chandis, at pp. 485–486.) Then as now, those definitions consist of the following: “ ‘Development[”] means ... the placement or erection of any solid material or structure; ... grading, removing, dredging, mining, or extraction of any materials; change in the density or intensity of use of land ... .’ (§ 65927.) ‘ “Project” means any activity involving the issuance to a person of a lease, permit, license, certificate, or other entitlement for use by one or more public agencies.’ (§ 65931.) “[“]Development project” means any project undertaken for the purpose of development. ... .’ (§ 65928.) It includes ‘a project involving the issuance of a permit for construction or reconstruction ... .’ (Ibid.)” (Chandis, at p. 486.) Chandis concluded that these definitions “apply when a local planning agency is considering a specific construction proposal” and “would not include the disapproval or conditional approval of a specific plan.” (Id. at p. 486.)

Still, these statutes do not resolve the meaning of the unhyphenated phrase “housing development project.” As their broad definitions suggest, the phrase could use development as a verbal adjective and mean a project to develop housing (a housing “development project”). On the other hand, the phrase could use development as a concrete noun and mean a project to build a housing development (a “housing-development” project), a concept these statutes do not define. Under the first interpretation, a project to build a single home would seemingly qualify as a housing development project, because it is a “project undertaken for the purpose of development” (§ 65928) and the development activity consists of constructing housing. Under the second interpretation, the same project would seemingly not qualify as a housing development project, since an individual single-family home is not a “housing development,” a term that generally refers to a group of housing units.<sup>7</sup> *1030 (See, e.g., Oxford English Dict. Online <<https://www.oed.com/view/Entry/88956?#eid1365281>> [as of June 15, 2022] [“the action or process of planning and building a group of houses and associated services on a site; (concrete) the result of this, a housing estate”]; Merriam-Webster Dict. Online <<https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/housing%20development>> **253 [as of June 15, 2022] [“a group of individual dwellings or apartment houses typically of similar design that are usually built and sold or leased by one management”].) We accept that some of the definitional statutes in the Planning and Zoning Law arguably support the first interpretation. But, as we now explain, the HAA's statutory context as a whole, legislative history, and purpose weigh more in favor of the second interpretation.

Since the definition of “housing development project” is ambiguous, we turn to the more specific statutory context in which it appears. (See Murphy v. Kenneth Cole Productions, Inc., supra, 40 Cal.4th at p. 1103.) Other parts of the HAA use “development” as a concrete noun when referring to housing development projects, suggesting that the phrase means a project to construct a housing development, not a project to develop housing. Section 65589.5(j)(2)(A) provides that “[i]f the local agency considers a proposed housing development project to be inconsistent, not in compliance, or not in conformity with an applicable ... provision ... , it shall provide the applicant with ... an explanation of the reason or reasons it considers the housing development to be inconsistent, not in compliance, or not in conformity.” (Italics added.) Subdivision (k), which addresses litigation to enforce the HAA, provides that a “court may issue an order or judgment directing the local agency to approve the housing development project or emergency shelter if the court finds that the local agency acted in bad faith when it disapproved or conditionally approved the housing development or emergency shelter in violation of this section.”<sup>8</sup> (§ 65589.5, subd. (k)(1)(A)(ii), italics added.) Other examples are found in subdivision (l), addressing increased fines for failing to comply with a court's order, and subdivision (o), addressing the ordinances, policies, and standards that apply to a housing development project depending on when a preliminary application is submitted.

*1031 Section 65582.1, which is also part of the Housing Element Law, further supports the interpretation that “housing development project” means a project to construct a housing development. Section 65582.1 sets forth the finding that the Legislature “has provided reforms and incentives to facilitate and expedite the construction of affordable housing” and lists the provisions containing those reforms and incentives. One of the provisions listed is the HAA, which is described as “Restrictions on disapproval of housing developments (Section 65589.5).” (§ 65582.1, subd. (c), italics added.) Section 65582.1 was added in 2006 (Stats. 2006, ch. 888, § 4, p. 6863), a few years after the definition of “housing development project” was added to the HAA, and has always described the HAA as pertaining to “housing developments.”<sup>9</sup>

**254 The legislative history of Senate Bill No. 2011 (1981–1982 Reg. Sess.) (Senate Bill No. 2011), which enacted the HAA, also supports the conclusion that “housing development project” refers to a project to build a housing development.<sup>10</sup> Committee reports uniformly described the bill as pertaining to “housing developments.” For example, under the heading “Housing developments,” a staff analysis stated the bill would “shift[ ] the burden of proof onto the county or city if it approves a housing development at less than the maximum permitted density, or if it disapproves a housing development which conforms to local planning, zoning, and development policies.” (Sen. Local Government Com., Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 2011, May 3, 1982, p. 1.) Likewise, a legislative analyst report stated the bill would “specif[y] the bases on which a local agency may decide to disapprove, or conditionally approve, a proposed housing development” and require “disapprovals ... [to] be based on [a] written finding[ ] by the local agency ... that the development would have an adverse impact on public health or safety.” (Legis. Analyst, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 2011, as amended Aug. 2, 1982, pp. 1–2.) Other legislative materials contain similar language. (E.g., Assem.3d reading analysis Sen. Bill No. 2011, as amended Aug. 17, 1982, p. 1 [bill “[r]equires a local agency to base its approval or disapproval of a proposed housing development on written findings, as specified”]; Sen. Republican Caucus, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 2011, Aug. 23, 1982, p. 2 [“If a proposed housing *1032 development that was originally disapproved must now be approved as a result of this measure, the locality would experience increased costs for public services”].)

The legislative history of Senate Bill No. 2011 also highlights that the HAA encourages more housing by limiting a local agency's ability to approve lower-density projects—a scenario that would never apply to a single-unit project. The HAA, both as originally enacted and today, restricts agencies’ ability to approve projects “upon the condition that the project be developed at a lower density.” (Stats. 1982, ch. 1438, § 2, p. 5484; § 65589.5(j)(1).) As one committee report explained, “The cost of housing reflects several factors including, of course, the cost of land and the installation of infrastructure to service the unit. The greater the number of units which may be constructed on a given parcel, the lower the unit's proportionate share of the land and infrastructure costs will be. The provisions of Section 65589.5 would discourage reducing the density of a proposed development which meets the zoning and planning policies in effect.” (Assem. Com. on Housing & Community Development, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 2011, as amended May 19, 1982, p. 1.) This goal further suggests that the term “housing development project” was meant to cover projects to construct housing developments, not projects to build one unit of housing.

Subsequent legislative activity regarding the HAA is consistent with this conclusion, contrary to plaintiffs' claim otherwise. Plaintiffs direct us to a Senate committee **255 report on Senate Bill No. 619 that described the bill as defining "housing development project" to mean "residential housing or mixed-use developments." (Sen. Com. on Natural Resources and Wildlife, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 619, Apr. 21, 2003, p. 3.) Plaintiffs also point out that another Senate committee report described the bill as "provid[ing] that, in addition to residential-only developments, the protections of the anti-NIMBY act apply to mixed-use residential developments in which neighborhood-servicing commercial uses occupy the first floor of a building that is at least two stories." (Sen. Rules Com., Off. of Sen. Floor Analyses, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 619, as amended August 25, 2003, p. 3.) According to plaintiffs, these reports show that "[t]he Legislature did not suggest that the 'residential housing' meant by a housing development project under the HAA is subject to a minimum number of units. Rather, it referred generally to residential developments, alongside mixed-use developments."

To the extent these portions of the Senate committee reports are revealing, they do not advance plaintiffs' position. Rather, the reports repeatedly use development as a concrete noun, which supports the interpretation of "residential units" to mean more than one unit. Instances of this usage also appear *1033 in other portions of the legislative history of Senate Bill No. 619. (See, e.g., Sen. Com. on Housing & Community Development, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 619, as amended Apr. 1, 2003, p. 3 [the bill "provides that, in addition to residential-only developments, the protections of the [HAA] apply to mixed-use residential developments".]) And although the phrase "residential housing or mixed-use developments" could be interpreted to refer to "residential housing," a term whose ordinary meaning would include an individual single-family home, the phrase could also be read so that "residential housing" modifies "developments," constituting another use of "development" as a concrete noun.

For its part, the County points out that a few years ago, the Legislature proposed but ultimately rejected "a revision to the HAA that would have broadened the definition of housing development project in exactly the way that [plaintiffs] argue was already in place in the existing law." A June 13, 2019 Assembly amendment to Senate Bill No. 592 (2019–2020 Reg. Sess.) (Senate Bill No. 592) would have provided that "housing development project" under the HAA "may solely be, or may include, a single unit, including an accessory dwelling unit as defined in Section 65852.2" and "may solely be, or may include, the addition of one or more bedrooms to an existing residential unit."<sup>11</sup> The accompanying Legislative Counsel's Digest noted that the bill "would define a housing development project for purposes of [the HAA] to also include a single unit, including an accessory dwelling unit, or the addition of one or more bedrooms to an existing residential unit." (Legis. Counsel's Dig., Sen. Bill No. 592.)

The County claims that "[t]his proposed amendment shows that the existing law did not cover single-family homes, because if it did, there would have been no reason to propose such an amendment." But as the County also admits, our state Supreme Court has "repeatedly observed that the Legislature's failure to enact a proposed amendment to an existing statutory scheme offers only limited guidance, if any, **256 concerning the Legislature's original intent." (Martin v. Szeto (2004) 32 Cal.4th 445, 451 [9 Cal.Rptr.3d 687, 84 P.3d 374].) This is because " '[t]he unpassed bills of later legislative sessions evoke conflicting inferences. Some legislators might propose them to replace an existing prohibition; others to clarify an existing permission. A third group of legislators might oppose them to preserve an existing prohibition, and a fourth because there was no need to clarify an existing permission.' " (Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal.3d 721, 735, fn. 7 [180 Cal.Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115].)

*1034 Here, the unpassed bill's import is further clouded because the amended definition of "housing development project" was only one of several ways the bill would have changed the HAA. The other changes would have included extending the HAA "to any land use decision by a local agency" and providing that "a general plan, zoning[,] or subdivision standard or criterion is not 'applicable' if its applicability to a housing development project is discretionary or if the project could be approved without the standard or criterion being met." (Assem. Com. on Housing and Community Development, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 592, as amended June 13, 2019, p. 1.) Moreover, even the amended definition itself had several aspects, providing not just that single units but also ADUs and added bedrooms were covered. Under these circumstances, we cannot parse out the significance of the proposal and rejection of adding "a single unit" to the definition of "housing development project."

Even if we could otherwise interpret the failed amendment to demonstrate the Legislature's collective belief that the HAA either does or does not include a single residential unit, there is a third possibility that subsequent legislative events suggest: There is currently no legislative agreement on this issue, leaving it all the more necessary for us to concentrate on the intent when the law was enacted. Recently, Senate Bill No. 8 (2021–2022 Reg. Sess.) (Senate Bill No. 8) amended the definition of “housing development project” in section 65905.5.<sup>12</sup> That statute, which is also part of the Planning and Zoning Law, limits the number of hearings that may be held on “a proposed housing development project [that] complies with the applicable, objective general plan and zoning standards in effect at the time an application is deemed complete.” (§ 65905.5, subd. (a).) Originally, section 65905.5, which was enacted in 2019, provided that “[h]ousing development project” has the same meaning as defined in paragraph \(2\) of subdivision \(h\) of Section 65589.5,” that is, as under the HAA. (Former § 65905.5, subd. (b)(3); Stats. 2019, ch. 654, §§ 1, 4.) Senate Bill No. 8 added to section 65905.5’s definition so that it now provides not only that the phrase means the same thing it does under the HAA but also that “[h]ousing development project” includes a proposal to construct a single dwelling unit. This subparagraph shall not affect the interpretation of the scope of paragraph (2) of subdivision (h) of Section 65589.5,” i.e., the HAA’s definition of the phrase. (§ 65905.5, subd. (b) (3), italics added; Stats. 2021, ch. 161, § 2.) The bill also added subdivision (f), which provides that these additions to the statutory definition “do not constitute a change in, but are declaratory of, existing law.” (§ 65905.5, subd. (f); Stats. 2021, ch. 161, § 2.)

**257 *1035 The italicized portion of the amended definition of “housing development project” demonstrates the Legislature’s reluctance to take a position on the same phrase’s meaning under the HAA, even though it renders section 65905.5 internally inconsistent. “Housing development project” under that provision still “has the same meaning” as it does under the HAA, and Senate Bill No. 8’s amendments to the statutory definition “do not constitute a change in, but are declaratory of, existing law.” (§ 65905.5, subds. (b)(3)(A), (f).) It would thus follow that the new declaration that the term “includes a proposal to construct a single dwelling unit” (§ 65905.5, subd. (b)(3)(C)) applies equally to the term’s definition under the HAA, since the two statutory definitions are equivalent and the amendment to section 65905.5’s definition did not change existing law. Yet simultaneously, the new declaration cannot be used to interpret the term under the HAA.

A Senate Committee report on Senate Bill No. 8 frankly acknowledged these contradictions in section 65905.5’s amended definition of “housing development project” and tied them to legislative inaction to address the same phrase’s definition under the HAA. (Sen. Com. on Governance and Finance, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 8, Mar. 25, 2021, pp. 3–4.) The report stated:

“Debate rages in planning circles over whether the HAA applies to single unit projects or just to multi-family projects ... . Some developers argue that the HAA applies to all housing projects, while, in an unusual alliance, local governments and the [Department] agree that it only applies to developments of two units or more. SB 8 muddies the waters further:

“On the one hand, SB 8 amends the definition of housing development project in some parts of the bill to include ... single unit developments, but specifically does not amend the definition in the HAA, even though the bill makes other changes to the HAA.

“On the other hand, SB 8 says that the changes it makes to the definition of housing development project are declaratory of existing law, which developers might point to in arguing that the HAA’s definition should be read broadly.

“What is clear from SB 8 is that housing projects of any size ... can benefit from the Housing Crisis Act’s protections ... . The scope of the HAA is a much bigger conversation than the issues raised in SB 8, but legislation providing clarity on the definition of housing development project under the HAA may be beneficial down the line.” (Sen. Com. on Governance and Finance, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 8, supra, pp. 3–4.)

[12] Given this clear legislative intent not to decide whether “housing development project” under the HAA includes a single residential unit, we *1036 will not rely on section 65905.5’s amended definition to construe the phrase’s meaning. As plaintiffs point out, even if Senate Bill No. 8 had been intended to clarify the HAA definition, “a legislative declaration of an existing statute’s meaning is neither binding nor conclusive in construing the statute. ... Indeed, there is little logic and some incongruity in the notion that one Legislature may speak authoritatively on the intent of an earlier Legislature’s enactment when a gulf of decades separates the two bodies.” (Western Security Bank v. Superior Court (1997) 15 Cal.4th 232, 244 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 243, 933

P.2d 507].) Instead, considering the statutory definition in context and legislative statements made both when the HAA was originally enacted and when the definition was passed into law, we conclude that it is more reasonable to interpret “housing development project” not to include a project to build an individual single-family home. (See **258 People v. Cornett (2012) 53 Cal.4th 1261, 1271 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 837, 274 P.3d 456] [“ [i]f a statute is amenable to two alternative interpretations, the one that leads to the more reasonable result will be followed’ ”].)

[13] Finally, we address plaintiffs’ argument that “[i]n order to effectuate the purpose and intent of the HAA, its definition of ‘housing development project’ should be interpreted liberally to include individual single-family homes.” As previously noted, the HAA is to be interpreted so as “to afford the fullest possible weight to the interest of, and the approval and provision of, housing.” (§ 65589.5, subd. (a) (2)(L).) Such rules of liberal construction do not, however, allow us to ignore the statutory language or construe it “ ‘to accomplish a purpose that does not appear on the face of the statute or from its legislative history.’ ” (Chester v. State of California (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 1002, 1008 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 575]; see Even Zohar Construction & Remodeling, Inc. v. Bellaire Townhouses, LLC (2015) 61 Cal.4th 830, 842 [189 Cal.Rptr.3d 824, 352 P.3d 391]; see, e.g., Leber v. DKD of Davis, Inc. (2015) 237 Cal.App.4th 402, 410 [187 Cal.Rptr.3d 731]; Hoitt v. Department of Rehabilitation (2012) 207 Cal.App.4th 513, 526 [143 Cal.Rptr.3d 461].) The HAA’s purpose of encouraging more housing does not compel us to interpret the statute to encompass as many projects as possible, without regard to other indications that a project must have at least two residential units to qualify as a “housing development project” under section 65589.5, subdivision (h)(2)(A).

In any case, we do not agree with plaintiffs that the policy of interpreting the HAA “to afford the fullest possible weight” to providing more housing necessarily means the statute should be construed to apply to individual single-family homes. If a project must include at least two units to benefit from the HAA’s easier approval process, potential builders have more incentive to construct more than one unit. Thus, plaintiffs are incorrect that interpreting the HAA to be inapplicable to a project to construct one single-family home will “hav[e] the dire effect of excluding any district *1037 zoned solely for single-family homes from the HAA.” (Boldface and italics omitted.) While some might choose not to build a single residence because the project is not covered by the HAA, many others might choose to build multiple single-family homes, and build them more densely.<sup>13</sup>

Plaintiffs also unduly emphasize that the HAA is intended “to significantly increase the approval and construction of new housing for all economic segments of California’s communities.” (§ 65589.5, subd. (a)(2)(K).) Housing for more affluent people may not be categorically excluded from the HAA, but many of the Legislature’s other statutory findings convey particular concern about the lack of affordable housing. For example, the housing crisis is characterized as “hurting millions of Californians, robbing future generations of the chance to call California home, ... [and] worsening poverty and homelessness.” (§ 65589.5, subd. (a)(2)(A).) “Only one-half of California’s households are able to afford the cost of housing in their local regions,” and “[I]ack of supply and rising **259 costs are compounding inequality and limiting advancement opportunities for many Californians.” (§ 65589.5, subd. (a)(2) (E)–(F).) Problems like homelessness, being forced to leave the state, or having limited advancement opportunities are far more likely to affect Californians of lower income levels than parties who are in the position to build their own single-family homes.<sup>14</sup>

Given the statutory context in which the definition of “housing development project” appears and the legislative history, we hold that the HAA does not apply to projects to build individual single-family homes. Accordingly, plaintiffs’ project is not subject to the HAA.

C.–D. ** [NOT CERTIFIED FOR PUBLICATION]

*1038 III.

Disposition

The order denying plaintiffs’ petition for a writ of administrative mandamus is affirmed. Respondents are awarded their costs on appeal.

Margulies, J., and Wiss, J., *** concurred.

A petition for a rehearing was denied July 5, 2022, and appellants’ petition for review by the Supreme Court was denied August 31, 2022, S275705.

All Citations

79 Cal.App.5th 1016, 295 Cal.Rptr.3d 243, 22 Cal. Daily Op. Serv. 6304, 2022 Daily Journal D.A.R. 6087

Footnotes

- * Pursuant to California Rules of Court, rules 8.1105\(b\) and 8.1110, this opinion is certified for publication with the exception of parts II.C. and II.D.
- *** Judge of the San Francisco Superior Court, assigned by the Chief Justice pursuant to article VI, section 6 of the California Constitution.
- 1 All further statutory references are to the Government Code unless otherwise noted.
- 2 The trial court did not enter a separate judgment, but an order denying a petition for a writ of administrative mandamus is appealable if it “effectively disposes of the action because no issues remain to be determined.” (JKH Enterprises, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (2006) 142 Cal.App.4th 1046, 1056 [48 Cal.Rptr.3d 563].)
- 3 Californians for Homeownership, The California Association of Realtors®, Building Industry—Bay Area, and YIMBY Law were granted leave to file a brief as amici curiae in support of plaintiffs on this question.
- 4 As originally enacted, the statutory definition provided that “housing development project” meant “a use consisting of either of the following: [¶] (A) Residential units only. [¶] (B) Mixed-use developments consisting of residential and nonresidential uses in which nonresidential uses are limited to neighborhood commercial uses and to the first floor of buildings that are two or more stories. As used in this paragraph, ‘neighborhood commercial’ means small-scale general or specialty stores that furnish goods and services primarily to residents of the neighborhood.” (Stats. 2003, ch. 793, § 3, p. 5871.) The definition was subsequently amended to add “transitional housing or supportive housing” as a qualifying use (Stats. 2007, ch. 633, § 4, p. 5494) and to change the description of a mixed-use development (Stats. 2017, ch. 368, § 1).
- 5 The trial court took judicial notice of two other committee analyses of Senate Bill No. 619, which plaintiffs rely on and we discuss further below. On our own motion, we take judicial notice of the additional legislative materials cited in this paragraph and below. (See Evid. Code, §§ 452, subd. \(c\), 459.)
- 6 While we agree with plaintiffs on this point, we do not agree that excluding an individual single-family home from the HAA would also “create an absurd inconsistency” in light of the provision for mixed-use developments. Plaintiffs posit that a three-story building composed of “ground-floor retail and a single residential unit on the second and third floors” would qualify as a “housing development project” even though a standalone single residential unit would not. But this might encourage inclusion of a residential unit that would not otherwise have been built in a more commercial area. In any case, we suspect that projects to construct a single residential unit at least double the size of an accompanying nonresidential use are not common.
- 7 Since we need decide only whether a project consisting of one residential unit qualifies as a “housing development project,” we express no opinion whether that term contemplates a minimum number of units that is greater than two.
- 8 In Honchariw v. County of Stanislaus (2013) 218 Cal.App.4th 1019 [160 Cal.Rptr.3d 609] (Honchariw II), the Fifth District held that a developer was not entitled to attorney’s fees under former section 65589.5, subdivision \(k\), which provided that such fees be awarded to a prevailing party “who proposed the housing development.” (Former § 65589.5, subd. \(k\); see Honchariw II, at p. 1023.) After observing that Honchariw I’s interpretation of “housing development project” was not binding because of the “slight difference in language,” Honchariw II concluded that in context “housing development” included only affordable housing. (Honchariw II, at pp. 1023–1024.) Subdivision (k) has since been amended to apply to litigation involving all housing development projects, not just those to build affordable housing, and the language Honchariw II addressed has been removed. (See § 65589.5, subd. \(k\)\(1\)\(A\)\(i\)\(II\).)

- 9 Although not indicative of legislative intent, decisions interpreting the HAA have also described it as involving housing developments. (E.g., California Renters, supra, 68 Cal.App.5th at p. 835 [HAA governs disapproval of “a proposed housing development”]; Kalnel Gardens, LLC v. City of Los Angeles (2016) 3 Cal.App.5th 927, 938 [208 Cal.Rptr.3d 114] [HAA “was designed to limit the ability of local governments to reject or render infeasible housing developments based on their density”]; Chandis, supra, 52 Cal.App.4th at p. 485 [before Honchariw I, describing the HAA as “concern[ing] affordable housing developments”].)
- 10 On our own motion, we take judicial notice of the legislative materials pertaining to Senate Bill No. 2011 that are cited below. (See Evid. Code, §§ 452, subd. (c), 459.)
- 11 The trial court took judicial notice of the June 13, 2019 amendment to Senate Bill No. 592. On our own motion, we take judicial notice of further legislative history of the bill cited below. (See Evid. Code, §§ 452, subd. (c), 459.) As ultimately passed, Senate Bill No. 592 addressed matters unrelated to the HAA. (Stats. 2020, ch. 230.)
- 12 At our request, the parties submitted supplemental briefing on what effect, if any, Senate Bill No. 8 had on the interpretation of the phrase “housing development project” under the HAA. We granted plaintiffs’ accompanying request for judicial notice of legislative materials related to Senate Bill No. 8.
- 13 In fact, the Legislature recently enacted a new law that further encourages denser development in areas zoned for single-family homes. Under Senate Bill No. 9 (2021–2022 Reg. Sess.), effective January 1, 2022, “[a] proposed housing development containing no more than two residential units” on a qualifying single-family lot or the proposed subdivision of such a lot is subject to a local agency’s ministerial instead of discretionary approval. (§ 65852.21; Stats. 2021, ch. 162, §§ 1–2.)
- 14 We do not place such parties in the same category as those who might live in a development of multiple single-family homes like the one at issue in Honchariw I. Plaintiffs rhetorically ask why “the Legislature [would] intend for the HAA to apply to multiple single-family homes when permitted together ... but not when permitted one at a time,” but such multihome projects not only increase housing stock more efficiently but also are more apt to be affordable for a greater number of people.
- ** See footnote, ante, page 1016.